the Commonwealth

Who will know of my detention?

The arresting officer must notify you 'without delay' of your right to have your Consulate informed about your detention. At the same time, subject to your consent, arresting officer is also obliged to inform your consulate about your detention. Additionally, officers at the prison where you are detained must notify, pursuant to your consent, the consulate of your native country about your detention and current place of custody. However, such intimations cannot be sent directly to the embassy and have to be routed through the relevant state home departments to the Ministry of External Affairs (MEA) which then shares the information with your embassy. This can take time. Your lawyer can however contact the embassy directly on your behalf to inform them about your detention.

Who will inform my family about my detention?

Your embassy or lawyer can inform your family about your detention. In case your family members are in the same city as you they can visit you in your place of detention. Embassies can convey your messages to your family members. In some states the Indian Red Cross Society too assists in facilitating contact with family members.

What my embassy may do for me?

Your embassy acts as a go-between your family and the Government of India. Once notified of your arrest, the consular officers of the embassy must come to visit you in prison. However, the embassy will need to apply for permission to do so through the MEA. Ideally, it must do so as soon as they come to know about your arrest. But obtaining permission can take time. Embassies generally help the prisoner understand the Indian prison and court system. They also help in facilitating and restoring family ties by informing your family, friends and relatives about your detention and then sustaining contact. They also keep a check on your health and whether proper medical care is accorded to you by the detaining authority. Often, embassies facilitate interpretation or translation of legal documents, however, you may once want to check with the consular officer who comes to visit you in prison. You can ask your family/friends to visit the embassy's website to find out more.

What my embassy may not do for me?

Embassies generally do not pay bail, fines or bear the cost of legal representation. It may not be able to send any parcels to you on behalf of your family and friends. It may not intervene in legal proceedings. It may not fund your travel ticket home after the completion of your sentence. In short, they cannot get you out of jail. You need to go through the legal process.

What are the different stages of incarceration?

You could be inside a prison as a detainee prisoner, remand prisoner, undertrial prisoner or convict prisoner. A detainee is one detained under preventive sections of criminal law. A prisoner is said to be in remand till the time the police does not file a charge sheet against him. An undertrial prisoner is one whose trial has started but no decision has been taken as yet by the court on his guilt. A convict prisoner is one who has been pronounced guilty beyond doubt by a court and sentenced to imprisonment. If you have completed your sentence but are still in prison, you must inform your embassy at the earliest.

Can my lawyer visit me in jail?

Yes. Generally there are no limitations on number of visits made by lawyers. Your legal counsel can make reasonable number of visits to you on all working days except government holidays by making an application to the Superintendent of the jail. These visits will be conducted in the presence of prison officials but out of their hearing.

I cannot afford lawyer. What can I do?

All persons in custody are entitled to free legal aid services. In case you are unrepresented in your court hearings, or your appointed lawyer does not show up in last few hearings and cannot be contacted, you can avail legal aid services through the following channels:

- a. Inform the prison staff – They can write a letter to the concerned court on your behalf and also submit legal aid application to the concerned legal services authority.
- b. Inform representatives of the legal services authority - They might visit the prison. Generally prisons are visited by a paralegal volunteers or jail visiting lawyers at the prison legal aid clinic which can assist in filing and processing of your legal aid application.

Can I use mobile phones inside a jail?

Using personal mobile phones is prohibited in Indian jails. Most jails have network jammers installed in their premises that will interfere with the phone network and eventually damage the phone.

How can I call my friends and family?

Prisoners of foreign origin are generally not allowed to make calls abroad even though there are telephone facilities in your prison. You can however submit applications requesting to make calls at your own cost or receive calls on these facilities or in the Superintendent's office. You can, however, make phone calls to your friends and relatives in India. If there are no such facilities, you could ask the Superintendent to contact the Indian Red Cross Society, which can help in restoring your family ties.

Can my family and friends come to visit me? How many visits am I allowed?

Yes, they can visit you but the number of visits and duration varies from state to state. The state prison manual should contain the relevant details governing visits.

In West Bengal, you are allowed to meet your friends and family once a week for 10-15 minutes. However, a maximum of only three visitors are allowed during a meeting.

In Rajasthan, frequency of meeting is different for an undertrial and convict. While an undertrial prisoner is entitled for meetings at an interval of every seven days, a convict can have meetings at an interval of a fortnight.

What is the procedure for my family to visit me?

The family or person who intends to visit the prisoner, if of foreign origin, must write to the Secretary, State Home Department, requesting for permission to visit the prisoner. The application should contain the details of the prisoner (age, sections charged with, name of the jail) and the details of the visitor (name, relationship with the prisoner, residence details, language spoken). This letter may be marked to the Superintendent of the Jail and Inspector General of Prison as well. Upon receiving the letter, the state Home Department will write to the Government of India seeking their approval and permission. If the permission is granted, a letter will come to the Superintendent of the jail where you are detained containing specific visiting hours and other necessary details. The Superintendent will then write to the Intelligence Bureau apprising them of such a visit and can, if needed, request them to depute an interpreter who can understand the language of the visitor and foreign national prisoner.

What can my family and friends bring for me in prison?

Family or friends may be able to bring the following items:

- Food
- Clothes, including warm clothes
- Books/magazines/newspapers
- Items of hygiene like soap, shampoo, sanitary towels, etc.

The rules on what items can be brought by visitors will vary from one state to another. Family or friends need to contact the prison authorities for a list of items which can be brought by them.

Some general rules:

- Family or friends cannot bring any food which has meat produce in them or any food items which are non-vegetarian in nature. Please note that in some States, eggs are considered to be non-vegetarian food items. All items will be checked before being handed to you.
- Items in glass/tin containers, knives, blades, shaving equipment and medicines of any description (some prisons do not allow tobacco and matches) are not normally permitted. Medicines are allowed only if prescribed by the prison doctor.

Can I work inside prison?

If you are sentenced to rigorous imprisonment by the court you can work inside a prison and you will be entitled to wages. However, if you are sentenced to simple imprisonment you cannot work.

What happens when I finish my sentence?

The court order generally states that after the completion of sentence a foreign prisoner will be repatriated/deported to his country. The time taken for your deportation will depend on whether you have a valid passport, visa and money to fund your travel.

Ideally, at the time of your conviction the Superintendent of the jail you are lodged in will write to the District Intelligence Branch (IB) or Criminal Investigation Department (CID) informing them of your estimated date of release. This letter will then be forwarded to the Home Department of the State for verifying your nationality. The Home Department, in turn will write to the Foreigners Division of Ministry of Home Affairs and the concerned territorial division of MEA. The MEA will contact your consulate which will work with the government of your country to verify your nationality, issue Emergency Travel Certificate (ETC) and book your travel tickets. Please note that not all embassies fund travel expenses and in some cases, you may be asked to pay for your own airfare. It is important that you keep knowledge of your passport or identification cards or contact details of your family that may assist your consulate in expediting the verification process.

Generally all items seized from the body of a person are kept at the police station. This can include the passport as well. Please keep knowledge of your belongings when you are transferred to a prison. In case they have not been transferred with you please approach the prison administration immediately to write to concerned police station for transfer of your belongings. If that doesn't work, approach your embassy for assistance in this regard. These documents are important in the event of your release and timely repatriation. Without these there may be delays in issue of your emergency travel certificate.

*All Communications to the Embassy Made Through Ministry of External Affairs, Consular, Visa and Passport Division for Consular Access or the Territorial Division for Repatriation Process

Do I have the option of serving the rest of my sentence in my home country?

Yes, you can, provided you fulfill the following conditions:

- The country of your nationality has an agreement with India under the Repatriation of Prisoners Act 2003. You may check the website of Consular Passport and Visa Division of the Ministry of External Affairs or request the Superintendent to see the updated list.
- You do not have a pending inquiry, trial or any other proceeding.
- You have not been awarded the death penalty.
- You have not been convicted under the military law.
- Your transfer is not prejudicial to the sovereignty, security or any other interest of India.

If you fulfill all the aforementioned conditions, please make an application to the Joint Secretary (CS), Government of India, Ministry of Home Affairs by filling Form I of the Repatriation of Prisoners Rules, 2004.

On receipt of the application, the Central Government will write to the Superintendent of the jail where you are lodged in seeking relevant documents. If they are satisfied with your application, they will forward it to your country along with the copy of the judgment and the relevant provisions under which you have been sentenced; the nature, duration and date of commencement of your sentence; your medical report or any other report regarding your antecedents or character and any other information they may consider necessary.

If the application is accepted by your country, the Indian government will seek documentary proof confirming your nationality; copy of the relevant law that criminalizes the offence you committed in India in your country; statement of duration and enforcement of your sentence in your country upon transfer; undertaking to administer the remaining part of your sentence and to comply with the conditions of the Central Government and any other information or document which it may consider necessary.

On receipt of the documents and upon satisfaction, the Central Government will issue a warrant for transfer and request your country to specify the person and the place within India where you will be handed over.

Once your country gives this information, it will authorize an officer not below the rank of a Joint Secretary in the State Government in whose prison you were lodged to escort you till the place authorized by your country along with your records and belongings.

Once you have been handed over to the authorized person, the Superintendent of the jail you were lodged at will deliver the copy of warrant to the court which committed you to this prison.

CHRI PROGRAMMES

Commonwealth Human Rights Initiative (CHRI) believes if human rights, genuine democracy and development are to become a reality in peoples' lives then the Commonwealth members, an association of 52 former British Colonies, must be held accountable for good governance. CHRI promotes it through international advocacy on human rights, access to justice and access to information. It does so through research, publications, workshops, information dissemination and advocacy. There are three principal programmes:

1. Access to Justice

Police Reforms: In far too many countries the police are seen as an oppressive instrument of state rather than as protectors of citizens' rights, leading to widespread rights violations and denial of justice. CHRI promotes systemic reforms and accountability so that the police act as upholders of the rule of law. In India, CHRI's programme aims at disseminating information and views based on ground realities and supporting police reform. In South Asia, we work to strengthen civil society engagement on police reforms. In East Africa and Ghana, CHRI is examining police accountability issues and political interference.

Prison Reforms: CHRI works on increasing transparency of a traditionally closed system and exposing malpractices. A major area highlights the failures of the legal system that result in massive overcrowding and unconscionably long pre-trial detention and prison overstay. We look at reviving oversight system and believe that focus on these areas can bring improvements to the corrective system as well as have an effect on the administration of justice.

2. Access to Information

CHRI is acknowledged as one of the main organisations working to promote Access to Information across the Commonwealth. It encourages countries to pass and implement effective Right to Information (RTI) laws. It assists in the development of legislation and has been successful in promoting Right to Information laws and practices in India, Sri Lanka, Afghanistan, Bangladesh and Ghana. In Ghana, CHRI is the Secretariat for the RTI Civil Society Coalition. We critique new legislations and intervene to bring best practices into the knowledge of the governments and civil societies both when laws are being drafted and at the time of first implementation. The experience of working in hostile environments, as well as culturally varied jurisdictions, allows CHRI to bring insights. In Ghana, for instance, it has been promoting knowledge about the value of Access to Information which is guaranteed by the Constitution while at the same time pushing for the introduction of an effective and progressive RTI law.

3. International Advocacy and Programming

CHRI monitors Commonwealth member states' compliance with human rights obligations and advocates around human rights exigencies where such obligations are breached. We strategically engage with regional and international bodies including the Commonwealth Ministerial Action Group, the United Nations and the African Commission for Human and People's Rights. Ongoing initiatives include: reviewing Commonwealth members human rights promises at the United Nations Human Rights Council and the Universal Periodic Review; advocating for the protection of human rights defenders, free media and civil society space; and monitoring the performance of National Human Rights Institutions while pressing for their strengthening.
